- Each year on average 250,000 acre feet of water run to waste at the Salinas River's mouth. We now have pumps at the Rubber Dam that can easily divert that excess flow. For lack of anywhere to store only 10,000 acre feet of this water we will build a fossil fueled RO plant costing as much as $500 million. We could build a recreational lake and treatment facilities for much less

Avoid a Calamity, support public ownership of desalinated water. I say this because I'm a member of Citizens for Public Water, a RAND Fellow, and former systems engineer with Lockheed Martin. Beginning a year ago, I applied my expertise to complete & circulate a comparative project analysis of each of the current competing approaches and the original RDP. The CalAm approach is the highest-cost, most risky project, and most likely one to be sued so delivering water by Dec 2016 is highly unlikely.

I would like to see what a truly "publicly owned" utility would do for the citizens of the Monterey Peninsula. Why is a essential resource like water "for profit" anyway?

111

21:53, Dec 05, Dr. Tim Sanders, CA

Cal Am, or any other private entity, must not own any part of the source of water delivered to the public, including a desal source. Even the water itself -- a critical resource -- must be understood as publicly owned and its delivery understood as a public trust under strict public management and control.

proposals to the CPUC and the local public. It is very difficult and costly to attempt to match Cal Am's expertise in order to assure that the CPUC has balanced information to clearly understand the ratepayers and public's interests and make informed and fair decisions. The Division of Ratepayer Advocates, a department of the CPUC, that works hard to present the position of ratepayers, is overburdened and disadvantaged by not being in touch with the local public. Further, the position of the DRA on an application is often disregarded by the CPUC. Ultimately, the extensive political influence as well as attractive social dynamic of a behemoth like Cal Am and its parent company stacks the deck in Cal Am's favor. I order to assure control over our future water supply, its cost and the cost of delivery and to stop the seemingly unending stream of applications by Cal Am for reimbursements and increases in its compensation, the public must own our water production and distribution systems. We must work together to focus our expertise and exercise our political clout. The ratepayers and the public must move to purchase Cal Am at the earliest appropriate opportunity. George Brehmer

I have lived and worked on the Monterey Peninsula since 1965. My wife and I, family members, friends and business associates are impacted by the cost of water as well as the troubling way in which water matters have been handled. Our water production/capture, as well as water deliver systems, must be brought under our local control. We do not want our water to be under the influence of out of the area interests. Water is becoming one of the most important global resources. Some talk of "The Global Water Crisis" and refer to water as "The New Oil". As Steve Jobs said, we must "Think Different". This applies to water thinking on the Monterey Peninsula. Our thinking of the past three decades has not born fruit. It has cost rate and taxpayers millions of dollars. We, those who need and use water on the Monterey Peninsula, must own our water production and distribution systems. Cal Am, a subsidiary of one of the largest water companies in the world, is duty bound to maximize profits for its shareholders. To achieve this end, Cal Am has developed world class expertise to sell its

I believe it is unethical for any person -- or any corporation -- to profit monetarily from the only element, with the exception of air, that no living thing can survive without: water. When it becomes necessary -- because of population growth and unregulated corporate pollution -- for people to work together to sanitize a public utility such as water, the resulting cooperative should be non-profit, owned and operated collectively by 'the people' who use them.

09:44, Dec 10, Nancy Pratt, CA

Water should be provided at cost, not for profit. Please take action to provide residents of the Monterey Peninsula with the right to quality water, by an accountable public agency. After years of speaking out for public ownership of our water supply and delivery system, NOW IS THE TIME, because we are out of time.

09:28, Dec 10, Ms. Lisa Duggan, CA

Public water in the hands of the public, water is too important for life to be given to a corporation making more money on water that is safe and affordable. We need to own our water company, the profit on water should be reflected in our good health and not in someone's dividend.

For lack of anywhere to store only 10,000 acre feet of this water we will build a fossil fueled RO plant costing as much as $500 million. Avoid a Calamity, support public ownership of desalinated water. I say this because I'm a member of Citizens for Public Water, a RAND Fellow, and former systems engineer with Lockheed Martin. Beginning a year ago, I applied my expertise to complete & circulate a comparative project analysis of each of the current competing approaches and the original RDP. The CalAm approach is the highest-cost, most risky project, and most likely one to be sued so delivering water by Dec 2016 is highly unlikely.

Cal Am, or any other private entity, must not own any part of the source of water delivered to the public, including a desal source. Even the water itself -- a critical resource -- must be understood as publicly owned and its delivery understood as a public trust under strict public management and control.

proposals to the CPUC and the local public. It is very difficult and costly to attempt to match Cal Am's expertise in order to assure that the CPUC has balanced information to clearly understand the ratepayers and public's interests and make informed and fair decisions. The Division of Ratepayer Advocates, a department of the CPUC, that works hard to present the position of ratepayers, is overburdened and disadvantaged by not being in touch with the local public. Further, the position of the DRA on an application is often disregarded by the CPUC. Ultimately, the extensive political influence as well as attractive social dynamic of a behemoth like Cal Am and its parent company stacks the deck in Cal Am's favor. In order to assure control over our future water supply, its cost and the cost of delivery and to stop the seemingly unending stream of applications by Cal Am for reimbursements and increases in its compensation, the public must own our water production and distribution systems. We must work together to focus our expertise and exercise our political clout. The ratepayers and the public must move to purchase Cal Am at the earliest appropriate opportunity. George Brehmer

I have lived and worked on the Monterey Peninsula since 1965. My wife and I, family members, friends and business associates are impacted by the cost of water as well as the troubling way in which water matters have been handled. Our water production/capture, as well as water deliver systems, must be brought under our local control. We do not want our water to be under the influence of out of the area interests. Water is becoming one of the most important global resources. Some talk of "The Global Water Crisis" and refer to water as "The New Oil". As Steve Jobs said, we must "Think Different". This applies to water thinking on the Monterey Peninsula. Our thinking of the past three decades has not born fruit. It has cost rate and taxpayers millions of dollars. We, those who need and use water on the Monterey Peninsula, must own our water production and distribution systems. Cal Am, a subsidiary of one of the largest water companies in the world, is duty bound to maximize profits for its shareholders. To achieve this end, Cal Am has developed world class expertise to sell its

I believe it is unethical for any person -- or any corporation -- to profit monetarily from the only element, with the exception of air, that no living thing can survive without: water. When it becomes necessary -- because of population growth and unregulated corporate pollution -- for people to work together to sanitize a public utility such as water, the resulting cooperative should be non-profit, owned and operated collectively by 'the people!' who use them.
